

The Story of A Baby Quilt

CHARLOTTE STEVENS

In 1958, our third son, Tim was born. My husband's Aunt Bertha Halstead made him a baby quilt out of scraps. She used a feed bag for the back. I kept this quilt all these years. I wasn't sure what to do with it.

Then our granddaughter, Jennifer Bruselman (she happens to be Tim's oldest daughter), informed me that she was expecting a baby in June. So I repaired the worn pieces and gave the quilt to Jennifer for Christmas 2007. I made a label for the back with the history. Now the quilt is in Glasgow, Montana. Jennifer is also a quilter.

Jennifer Buselman, holding the baby quilt made for her father as an infant in 1958 and saved all these years by Jennifer's grandmother Charlotte Stevens – and sister Shelly Stevens

December 2007